2021 Call for Submissions

2021 CALL FOR SUBMISSIONS

Mayworks K'jipuktuk/Halifax is a multi-disciplinary arts festival which aims to help build a society that celebrates the history and struggles of the working people of Nova Scotia. The annual festival serves as an extended celebration of International Workers' Day - known also as May Day - and seeks to feature works that speak to struggles for justice across communities and generations.

The festival's interest reaches beyond art that relates directly to labour, work or the workplace, and includes art that speaks to any fight for social, economic or environmental justice.

The festival's mission is as follows:

- To promote working class culture in Nova Scotia through the works of local artists in our community.
- To connect workers to artists and artists to workers, and to celebrate workers as artists and artists as workers.
- To highlight the common struggles of artists and workers for decent wages, healthy working conditions and a vibrant, relevant culture, that reflects their lives.
- To feature the art created by everyday people, newcomers, equity-seeking groups, and people in poverty.
- To promote works of art that speak to the struggles of working people, justice and diversity.
- To celebrate the labour movement's rich heritage and legacy of struggle for a just society.

Mayworks K'jipuktuk/Halifax programming is not limited to any medium of artistic expression. The festival has programmed works of music, theatre, film, dance, printmaking, painting, photography, mixed-media, literature and more. Submissions for workshops, panels and lectures are also welcome. We are eager to further diversify our programming.

Mayworks began first in Toronto in 1986. There are now similar festivals in many locations across Canada, including here in K'jipuktuk/Halifax. Mayworks K'jipuktuk/Halifax emerged in 2009 as a project of the Halifax-Dartmouth & District Labour Council. It has since evolved into a festival with its own administrative body supported by various Nova Scotia labour organizations and government sponsors. 2021 will mark the 12th annual Mayworks K'jipuktuk/Halifax Festival. You can find out more information, and see many of the events featured in our 2020 Digital Festival edition, at mayworkshalifax.ca

ELIGIBILITY:

Anyone is welcome to submit. We welcome submissions from any art discipline.

Mayworks K'jipuktuk/Halifax seeks proposals that will speak of the working class experience, and of the experiences of oppressed peoples and communities. This can be extremely varied and can examine either contemporary or historical contexts. Both amateur and professional performers may apply.

Submissions need not be directly focused on work, labour or unions. Mayworks K'jipuktuk/Halifax programming includes works of art that address broad themes of social and environmental justice. Any submissions that address issues of inequality and injustice, or give voice to marginalized communities will be considered.

Under-represented groups and those disadvantaged at work and in society are particularly encouraged to apply. Material is particularly sought from youth, women, people with disabilities, African Nova Scotians, First Nation Communities, urban aboriginal artists, newcomer (immigrant) populations, 2SLGBTQ+, Acadian or under-represented cultures in Nova Scotia. Proposals must be submitted in English or French for consideration.

PAYMENT:

Artists will be compensated and Mayworks K'jipuktuk/Halifax strives to meet union fee standards in any given discipline. However, Mayworks K'jipuktuk/Halifax is not a funding body for the development of new works and offers remuneration for presentation only.

Mayworks K'jipuktuk/Halifax will gladly help with grant applications and offer resources at our disposal to help see your proposal come to fruition. However, planning must be considered for the financing of project development needed prior to the presentation of a project. Mayworks K'jipuktuk/Halifax acts as a presenter of the project, not a producer.

GUIDELINES:

All proposals must be received by the Mayworks K'jipuktuk/Halifax Festival no later than October 1st, 2020. All events must take place during the 2021 Mayworks K'jipuktuk/Halifax Festival within the two weeks immediately prior and after May 1st, 2021. Some flexibility may be possible, but contact must be made as soon as possible to inquire about available options.

*Struggle, movement and resistance grows from the collective work of artists and activists.
Organizing for change includes producing creative works and carrying out cultural interventions – works that shift mindsets, jar apathy, shatter myths and inspire passion.*

Protest and celebrate - because we need to raise our voices against exploitation and exclusion but we also need to think creatively about new strategies of solidarity and friendship, of social redistribution and self-emancipation.
